

THE REV. R. EDWIN KING JR., dressed in the uniform of a city prisoner, poses in front of the city jail.—(Journal Photo by Haywood Parvich.)

Integrated Diners Appeal; Release Scheduled Today

Recorder's Court officials said today a young theology student from Boston who was convicted along with a Negro for attempting to eat together at a downtown hotel will be released on bond this afternoon.

Wilbur Knox, court clerk, said an attorney for Ralph Edwin King Jr., announced bond on a charge of trespassing and refusing to obey an officer would be made by two local Negro businessmen later today.

They are, Knox said, Fred Love, restaurant operator, and Frank Lee, undertaker. A bond of $200 was set in the refusing to obey an officer and $250 bond was set in the trespassing case assigned to a grass cutting day by Judge D. Eugene Loe yesterday.

King, who was arrested while in the coffee shop of the Jefferson Davis Hotel while attempting to have lunch together, was placed in jail after the conviction.

and remained there at noon.

Yesterday afternoon was spent working in the "woodpile" at City Jail. Today, he helped move seats in the City Auditorium along with other prisoners and later was assigned to a grass cutting detail.

Dressed in prison clothing, the 23-year-old Methodist minister, had blisters on his hands from the work. While assigned to the "woodpile," he helped cut up trees felled in the city.

Minister Chops Wood, Cuts Grass For City

BY JOHN J. McDAVITT JR.
United Press International

A young northern minister, given hard labor for his second integrated lunch attempt, resumed chopping wood and cutting grass today "morally strengthened" by his personal attack on the "idol of segregation."

The Rev. Ralph Edwin King, an ordained Methodist minister studying at the Boston University School of Theology, told United Press International in an exclusive interview Wednesday night he was dedicated to civil disobedience "when the law is evil."

Rubbing his sore hands and feeling his two-day growth of beard, King said "when laws are evil as these in Virginia

year-old Negro student recently expelled from Alabama State College here for participating in protest against Southern segregation, into the all-white coffee shop of a downtown hotel. The two demanded to be served and refused to leave when ordered to do so by the hotel manager, C. A. Dione.

The two men were fined $100 each on a charge of failing to obey an officer and given a $100 fine and hard labor on a charge of trespassing.

The pair tried to integrate the dining room of the Hotel Dinkler-owned Jefferson Davis Tuesday less than two hours after they were fined $100 and $43 costs in Montgomery County Circuit Court.

IEK67.23

'Righters' Cou

States Righter Frank Mizell says he and the other five unpledged nominees for presidential elector probably will wait until after the Democratic National Convention to commit themselves.

The six states righters nominated in the May primaries have said they will not support the Democratic presidential nominee if he is hostile to the South but would favor voting instead for another.

Mizell gathered "to deliver a position statement" that the elector have that for ele

Chumley —
I guess you saw has one — I had just glance at p. 16
and did not think it was there — The
Ala. reporter knew me
Full my Memphis connections — Police had searched my hotel room
I found what I had in my briefcase —
I talked with Hank on phone to engage it —

IEK67.24

2
She was working for State Welfare Dept.
in Natchez. Her boss was under quarantine to Pineles but protected her — (She was leaving job in a few weeks
for an average 4 for her for working Se for her how clinic's — sacron area — had to be moved to a new with only a few
w. relatives & guests.
People in her home
People found a banking church, found a bank
W. A. Baker was in A week later I had orders
to return to Alabama
to return to Alabama
to return to Alabama

Alabama
Journal
(Montgomery)
6/9/1960

P. 1

Recorder's Court officials said today a young Negro who was convicted along with a Negro for attempting to eat together at a downtown hotel will be released on bond this afternoon. Wilbur Knox, court clerk, said an attorney for Ralph Edwin King Jr., announced bond on a charge of trespassing and refusing to obey an officer would be made by two local Negro businessmen later today.

They are, Knox said, Fred Lowe, restaurant operator, and Frank Lee, undertaker. A bond of $200 was set in the refusing to obey an officer and $250 bond was set in the trespassing case by Judge D. Eugene Loe yesterday.

King, who was arrested while in the coffee shop of the Jefferson Davis Hotel while attempting to have lunch together, was placed in jail after the conviction.

Minister Chops Wood, Cuts Grass For City

By JOHN J. McDAVITT JR.
United Press International

A young northern minister, expelled from Alabama State College here for participating in protests against Southern segregation, had labor for his reward when he attempted to chop wood and cutting of a downtown hotel. The Negro minister, Ralph Edwin King, C. A. Dione, an ordained Methodist minister studying at the Boston University School of Theology, told University Press International in an exclusive interview Wednesday night he was dedicated to civil disobedience "when the law is evil."

Rubbing his sore hands and feeling his two-day growth of beard, King said "when laws are evil as these in Montgomery, has the right—the moral obligation—to disobey them. We must take the situation in our own hands."

The 23-year-old Mississippi native denied he was trying to make a martyr of himself. "I can see why there is talk about my being a martyr, but I'm not enjoying it here. I'm tired. I'm not used to hard labor and I'm not trying to be a martyr."

King was sentenced to 10 days hard labor and given $200 in fines in Recorder's Court Wednesday for leading Elroy Embry, 33-

year-old Negro student recently expelled from Alabama State College here for participating in protests against Southern segregation, into the all-white coffee shop of a downtown hotel. The two men were fined $100 each on a charge of failing to obey an officer and given a charge of trespassing.

The pair tried to integrate the dining room of the Hotel (Dinkler-owned) Jefferson Davis Tuesday night. The two men were fined $100 each on a charge of failing to obey an officer and given a charge of trespassing.

The pair tried to integrate the dining room of the Hotel (Dinkler-owned) Jefferson Davis Tuesday night. The two men were fined $100 each on a charge of failing to obey an officer and given a charge of trespassing.

"The attempt to be served at the coffee shop was all my idea," King said as he rubbed his dirty hands on his blue and white prison garb. He appeared to miss his black clergy attire. "I was a guest at the hotel and Embry was my guest. I didn't think there was anything illegal about our eating together. In fact, the manager told me if I would go to my room he would serve both of us there."

King admitted, however, he thought something would happen. "If he tried to integrate the all-white dining room. But a restaurant serving a Negro and a white together would be something good here."

The Methodist minister said he would try to raise bond money. "I can get the money in Boston but the guards won't let me call. The people around here (city jail guards) are not too friendly. The guards have cursed me and they told the other prisoners I am a nigger-lover."

With solemnity, the Boston student said "I consider myself in approximately the same situation as early Christian martyrs who were put to death for refusing to put incense on the statue of the emperor. We refused to put a pinch of incense on the idol of segregation."

King paused for a minute, then added "I'm getting along all right with the other prisoners and call it irony if you will, Embry and I cut grass together Wednesday and we probably will again."

1EK6725